Catalog 2026

THE SEA CROW STORY

From windswept shores to imagined futures, Sea Crow Press shares stories that connect readers to the natural world. The press publishes fiction, nonfiction, and poetry with a strong focus on eco-literature, regional writing, and climate-aware storytelling.

Sea Crow Press is a woman-owned independent publishing company based on Cape Cod in Massachusetts. Founded to amplify distinctive voices, the press publishes approximately 12 books per year, featuring both emerging and established authors. Sea Crow Press is dedicated to producing books that inspire, engage, and endure.

Our books explore the natural world, regional life, and contemporary issues with heart and rigor. From eco-lit poetry to compelling fiction, Sea Crow Press seeks stories that deepen readers' understanding of place, environment, and human experience.

Sea Crow Press is a member of IBPA, NEIBA, IPNE, and CLMP and distributes through Simon & Schuster, Gardner's, Draft2Digital, Tantor Audio, and EBSCO.

Sometimes an Island

by Ellen Meeropol

A mosaic novel of family ties, climate upheaval, and resilience.

SUMMARY

After Cossacks burn their home, ten-year-old Deborah and her father flee their shtetl to a remote island on Maine's Penobscot Bay, seeking refuge and a new beginning. More than a century later, their descendants are once again uprooted, this time driven by rising seas and a collapsing world. From coastal towns to higher ground, a new community emerges: off-grid, tightly knit, and forged from an unlikely alliance of island refugees, family from Brooklyn, friends from a fractured Massachusetts co-op, and others seeking sanctuary as the political landscape grows increasingly volatile.

Sometimes gritty, sometimes magical, and always deeply human, Sometimes an Island asks a vital question: How do we navigate an uncertain future armed only with our memories, our hopes, and the bonds that hold us together?

KEY SELLING FEATURES

- Dual Timeline Narrative: weaves together a Jewish refugee story from a century ago with a near-future climate migration.
- Eco-Lit with Heart: combines climate fiction, refugee narratives, and magical realism.
- Universal Resonance: explores displacement, resilience, and the search for belonging across generations.
- Strong Intergenerational Focus: follows a family across time, showing how memory and legacy shape survival.
- Unlikely Alliances: highlights bonds formed among refugees, rural communities, and urban families.
- Deeply Human Portraits: gritty but hopeful, centering on ordinary people navigating extraordinary change.
- For Fans of Cli-Fi & Eco-Fiction: appeals to readers of Kim Stanley Robinson, Barbara Kingsolver (Demon Copperhead meets Flight Behavior), and Octavia Butler (Parable of the Sower).
- Timely & Urgent: engages with climate crisis, migration, and political volatility — today's most pressing issues.
- Literary Yet Accessible: lyrical storytelling that balances tough realities with hope and magic.

The Blazekeeper of Bowmore House

by Elizabeth de Veer

A Cinderella Retelling

SUMMARY

A hidden letter from her late mother reveals that Cinder is more than she seems—royal blood, a legacy of betrayal, and a shocking truth about her stepmother. Summoned to a king's ball by a lifelong friend, she must navigate secrets, danger, and a destiny far beyond her imagining. The Blazekeeper of Bowmore House is a lyrical, windswept reimagining of Cinderella, where identity, friendship, and the bonds between mothers and daughters shape a magical coming-of-age journey.

KEY SELLING FEATURES

- Unique fairy tale retelling: a lyrical, windswept reimagining of Cinderella with fresh twists and original characters.
- Strong female protagonist: Cinder is independent, brave, and relatable, appealing to readers who love coming-of-age journeys.
- Themes of identity and self-discovery: explores heritage, legacy, and personal growth.
- Mother-daughter bond: central emotional core highlighting intergenerational love and family complexity.
- Atmospheric setting: rugged coastal landscapes enhance the story's immersive, lyrical world-building.
- Mystery and intrigue: hidden letters, royal secrets, and unexpected twists keep readers engaged.
- Crossover appeal: suitable for YA, fantasy, and fairy tale enthusiasts, as well as adult readers who enjoy character-driven fiction.
- Marketable to fans of popular titles: readers of Ella Enchanted, Ash, and The Hazel Wood will be drawn to this story.
- Romantic tension: A slow-burn romance adds emotional stakes and a satisfying love story without overshadowing Cinder's personal journey.

MARKETING & PROMOTION

- Bookstore and Library Outreach: Events, signings, and book club appearances to connect directly with readers.
- Social Media Campaigns: Targeted to Cinderella and romantasy interest groups, including TikTok, Instagram, and Facebook.
- Reader Engagement: Regular email newsletters, interactive posts, and promotions to maintain ongoing interest.
- Promotional Offers: Giveaways and special offers on Goodreads and other book club websites.
- Media Outreach: Engagement with bloggers, reviewers, and interviewers.

DEAR MISSING FRIEND

Three hearts. Countless letters. One impossible choice.

SUMMARY

Through letters exchanged across oceans and Manhattan streets, Irish immigrant Catherine McGuirk navigates love, ambition, and heartbreak. Torn between her seafaring husband, the suitor she once refused, and her own dreams, Catherine's fate unfolds in an intimate, epistolary saga of passion, resilience, and 19th-century life.

KEY SELLING FEATURES

- Historical Setting: Set in 1840s Sag Harbor and Manhattan during the height of the whaling era and early Gold Rush, appealing to fans of immersive historical fiction.
- Strong Female Protagonist: Catherine McGuirk is a determined, ambitious heroine navigating love, loss, and career aspirations, aligning with readers who enjoy character-driven stories.
- Themes of Love and Choice: Explores romance, sacrifice, and the tension between personal ambition and societal expectations.
- Adventure and Drama: Incorporates whaling, sea voyages, and the allure of the Gold Rush, blending historical adventure with emotional stakes.
- For Fans of Popular Authors: Perfect for readers of Marie Benedict, Allison Pataki, and historical novels like The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society and The Irish Girl.
- Cross-Market Appeal: Appeals to historical fiction, women's fiction, and literary fiction readers, as well as book clubs and library audiences.

HERMIT

Solitude promised peace. Chaos had other plans.

SUMMARY

Holly's carefully ordered life is falling apart. Seeking a reset, she builds a DIY home retreat—but peace proves fleeting. Desperate, she takes a job as a garden hermit on a historic estate, embracing solitude, silence, and simplicity. Winter bites, the estate hides secrets, and the person who once took everything returns. Sharply funny and unexpectedly wise, Hermit is a story of chaos, reinvention, and finding oneself in the mayhem.

KEY SELLING FEATURES

- Relatable and witty: Holly's quest for solitude and self-reinvention resonates with readers navigating life changes.
- Humor with heart: Sharp, funny observations balance introspection, appealing to fans of Funny Story, Eleanor Oliphant Is Completely Fine, and Where'd You Go, Bernadette.
- Atmospheric setting: A historic estate and harsh winter create immersive, suspenseful, and character-driven tension.
- Strong female protagonist: Quirky, flawed, and deeply human—perfect for literary and women's fiction audiences.
- Cross-market appeal: Blends literary insight, psychological depth, and subtle suspense, drawing readers of humor, domestic drama, and personal transformation.

MARKETING & PROMOTION

- Community: Hermit was written during the author's Foundation of Cape Cod Written Word Fellowship, where she has been a guest on their Creative Exchange podcast twice, as well as a panelist at the Creative Exchange.
- Press Partnership: Author has worked with news outlets and arts writers on Cape Cod for the past decade and can reinforce efforts by Sea Crow to place reviews and features.
- Book Clubs: Hermit is a Sea Crow Press Book Club book; author participation is planned
- Events and Readings: The author has given numerous readings (including an excerpt from Hermit for the Arts Foundation) and has presented at fundraisers for WOMR, Lower Cape Outreach, Wellfleet Bay Wildlife Sanctuary, among others.
- Online presence: Author has a website, trouttowers.com, Sea Crow Press social media outreach, press release and website coverage.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Susan Blood is the author of How Not to Do Things, and a recipient of an Arts Foundation of Cape Cod Written Word Fellowship and Provincetown Community Compact dune shack residency. Her work has been published in The Christian Science Monitor, The Magazine of Yoga, Bachtrack, The Petrigru Review, and regional newspapers. Her radio show Opera Betty: opera for people who hate opera, has aired since 2010 on community radio WOMR. She has read and presented at fundraising events for organizations including the Arts Foundation of Cape Cod, WOMR Community Radio, and Wellfleet Bay Wildlife Sanctuary, and she continues to support writers and visual artists as the Institutional Giving Manager at the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown.

THE HEALER OF CORKY ROW

A mystical journey through family, tradition, and survival in a changing America.

SUMMARY

1908. Irish healer Nuala Conneely arrives in a struggling Massachusetts mill town bound by a sacred vow to preserve ancient traditions—and save her soul.

In Corky Row, her potions and prayers bind a community together. But every cure has a cost, and as her nine children come of age in a changing America, the old ways begin to fray.

Through war, hardship, and shifting beliefs, Nuala's certainty is tested. When a young Azorean woman seeks to learn her craft, Nuala must face a difficult truth: what must be preserved—and what must be let go. For readers of multigenerational historical fiction, The Healer of Corky Row is a powerful story of family, faith, and the price of tradition.

KEY SELLING FEATURES

- A sweeping historical saga for readers of historical fiction, immigrant stories, literary family sagas, and book club fiction—especially those drawn to Irish heritage and women-centered narratives
- A vivid portrait of America in transition, spanning immigration, the Great Depression, and wartime America
- A powerful female-centered story featuring a strong, complex protagonist rooted in Irish tradition and folklore
- A moving exploration of identity and belonging, tracing immigrant experience, generational change, and enduring family bonds
- A touch of mysticism and tradition, blending realism with Celtic folklore and healing practices
- Perfect for book clubs and saga lovers, appealing to readers of historical family fiction and emotionally rich, discussion-worthy novels

MARKETING & PROMOTION

- Publicist: professional publicist/marketing team
- Media: author website, Substack, and social media in addition to Sea Crow media
- Book events

- ARC's: NetGalley & BookSprout.
- Market coordination with: Galway City Museum, Fall River Historical Society
- The Healer of Corky Row is a Sea Crow Press bookclub book.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Virginia Ryan was born in Fall River, Massachusetts, then a dying mill town that inspired escape. It has since been resurrected. She writes fiction and essays and is drawn to stories of complicated families, imperfect heroines, and loss. THE HEALER OF CORKY ROW is her debut novel. Prior to writing this book, she worked as a journalist and marketer and served with the Peace Corps in Thailand. She is happiest when she's on, in, or near the water. It helps that she lives on Cape Cod.
